I hurried back along the way we had come, my torch in my hand. "Here," said I, "waiting to some man upon the ground, 'is where we lit up.'"

"Exactly."

"Well, it is marked as a forked cave, and in the darkness we passed the fork before the torches were lit. On the right side as we go out we should find the longer arm."

It was as I had said. We had not gone thirty yards before a great black opening loomed in the wall. We turned into it to find that we were in a much larger passage than before. Along it we hurried in breathless impatience for many hundreds of yards. Then suddenly, in the black darkness of the arch in front of us, we saw a gleam of dark red light. We stared in amazement. A sheet of steady flame seemed to cross the passage and to bar our way. We hastened toward it. No sound, no heat, no movement came from it, but still the great luminous curtain glowed before us, silvering all the cave and turning the sand to powder. I saw, until as we drew closer it discovered a circular edge.

"The moon, by George!" cried Lord John. "We are through, boys! We are through!"

It was indeed the full moon which shone straight down the aperture which opened upon the cliffs. It was a small rift, not larger than a window, but it was enough for all our purposes. As we craned our necks through it, we could see that the descent was not a very difficult one and that the level ground was no very great way below us. It was no wonder that from below we had not observed the place, as the cliffs curved overhead and an ascent at the spot would have seemed so impossible as to discourage close inspection. We started ourselves that with the help of our rope we could find our way down, and then returned, rejoicing, to our camp to make our preparations for the next evening.

What we did we had to do quickly and secretly, since even at this last hour the Indians might hold us back. Our stores we would leave behind us, save only our guns and cartridges. But Challenger had some unwise stuff which he ardently desired to take with him, and one particular package, of which I may not speak, which gave us more labor than any. Slowly the day passed, but when the darkness fell we were ready for our departure. With much labor we got our things up the steep ascent, looking back, took one last look at the strange land, last, long memory of that long evening of the woods, and in the center shimmering vaguely through the gloom, was the great lake, the mother of strange monsters. Even as we looked a high whistling cry, the call of some weird animal, rang clear out of the darkness. It was the very voice of the White Land bidding us goodbye. We turned and plunged into the cave which led to home.

Two hours later we, our packages and all we owned were at the foot of the cliff. Save for Challenger's luggage we had never a difficulty. Leaving it all where we descended, we started at once for Zambou's camp. In the early morning we approached it, but only to find, to our amazement, not one fire, but a dozen upon the plain. The rescue party had arrived. There were twenty Indians from the river, with stakes, ropes and all that could be useful for bridging the chasm. At least we shall have no difficulty now in carrying our packages when tomorrow we begin to make our way back to the Amazon.

The excitement which had been caused through those parts of South America which we had to traverse was imagined by us to be purely local, and I can assure our friends in England that we had no notion of the uproar which the mere rumor of our experiences had caused through Europe. It was not until the Ivernia was within 500 miles of Southampton that the wireless messages from paper after paper and agency after agency, offering huge prices for a short return message as to our actual results, showed us how strained was the attention not only of the scientific world, but of the general public. It was agreed among us, however, that no definite statement should be given to the press until we had met the members of the Zoological Institute, since as delegates it was our clear duty to give our first report to the body from which we had received our commission of investigation. Thus, although we found Southampton full of press men, we absolutely refused to give any information, which had the natural effect of focusing public attention upon the meeting, which was advertised for the evening of Nov. 7. For this gathering the Zoological Institute, which had been the scene of the inception of our task, was found to be far too small, and it was only in the Queen's hall, in Regent street, that accommodation could be found. It is now common knowledge the promoters might have ventured upon the Albert hall and still found their space too scanty.

It was for the second evening after our arrival that the great meeting had been fixed. For the first we had each, no doubt, our own pressing personal affairs to absorb us. Of mine I cannot yet speak. It may be that it stands further from me I may think of it and even speak of it with less emotion. I have shown the reader in the beginning of this narrative where lay the springs of my action. It is but right, perhaps, that I should carry on the tale and show also the results. And yet the day may come when I would not have it otherwise. At least I have been driven forth to take part in a wondrous adventure, and I cannot but be thankful to the force that drove me. And now I turn to the last, supreme, eventful moment of our adventure. As I was racking my brain as to how I should best describe it my eyes fell upon the issue of my own Journal for the morning of the 8th of November with the full and excellent account of my friend and fellow reporter Macdonald. What can I do better than transcribe his narrative, headlines and all? I admit that the paper was exuberant in the matter, out of compliment to its own enterprise in sending a correspondent, but the other great dailies were hardly less full in their account. Thus, then, friend Mac in his report:

THE NEW WORLD.
GREAT MEETING AT THE QUEEN'S HALL.
SCENES OF UPROAR.
EXTRAORDINARY INCIDENT.
WHAT WAS IT?
NOCTURNAL RIOT IN REGENT STREET.
(Special.)

"The much discussed meeting of the Zoological Institute, convened to hear the report of the committee of investigation sent out last year to South America to test the assertions made by Professor Challenger as to the continued existence of prehistoric life upon that continent, was held last night in the greater Queen's hall, and it is safe to say that it is likely to be a red letter date in the history of science, for the proceedings were of so remarkable and sensational a character that no one present is ever likely to forget them." (Oh, brother scribe Macdonald, what a monstrous opening sentence!) "The tickets were theoretically confined to members and their friends, but the latter is an elastic term, and long before 8 o'clock, the hour fixed for the commencement of the proceedings, all parts of the great hall were tightly packed. The general public, however, which most unreasonably entertained a grievance at having been excluded, stormed the doors at a quarter to eight, after a prolonged melee in which several people were injured, including Inspector Scoble of H division, whose leg was unfortunately broken. After this unwarrantable invasion, which not only filled every passage, but even intruded upon the space set apart for the press, it is estimated that nearly 5,000 people awaited the arrival of the travelers. When they eventually appeared they took their places in the front of a platform which already contained all the leading scientific men, not only of this country, but of France and of Germany. Sweden was also represented in the person of Professor Sergius, the famous zoologist of the University of Upsala."

CHAPTER XXII.
A Wonderful Demonstration:
THE entrance of the four heroes of the occasion was the signal for a remarkable demonstration of welcome, the whole audience rising and cheering for some minutes. An acute observer might, however, have detected some signs of dissent amid the applause and gathered that the proceedings were likely to become more lively than harmonious. It may safely be prophesied, however, that no one could have foreseen the extraordinary turn which they were actually to take.

Of the appearance of the four wanderers little need be said, since their photographs have for some time been appearing in all the papers. They bear few traces of the hardships which they are said to have undergone. Professor Challenger's beard may be more shaggy, Professor Summerlee's features more ascetic, Lord John Roxton's figure more gaunt, and all three may be burned to a darker tint than when they left our shores, but each appeared to be in most excellent health. As to our own representative, the well known athlete and international football player, E. D. Malone, he looks trained to a hair, and as he surveyed the crowd a smile of good humored contentment pervaded his honest but homely face. (All right, Mac, wait till I get you alone!)

When quiet had been restored and the audience resumed their seats after the ovation which they had given to the travelers the chairman, the Duke of Durham, addressed the meeting. "He would not," he said, "stand for more than a moment before that vast assembly and the treat which lay before them. It was not for him to anticipate what Professor Summerlee, who was the spokesman of the committee, had to say to them, but it was common rumor that their expedition had been crowned by extraordinary success." (Applause.)

"Professor Summerlee's rising was the signal for another extraordinary outbreak of enthusiasm, which broke out again at intervals throughout his address. Having described the genesis of their journey and paid a handsome tribute to his friend, Professor Challenger, coupled with an apology for the incredulity with which his assertions, now fully vindicated, had been received, he gave the actual course of their journey, carefully withholding such information as would aid the public in any attempt to locate the remarkable plateau. Having described in general terms their course from the main river up to the time that they actually reached the base of the cliffs, he enthralled his hearers by his account of the difficulties encountered by the expedition in their repeated attempts to mount them and finally described how they succeeded in their desperate endeavors.

"One had to pinch oneself to be sure that one was awake as one heard this same and practical professor in cold, measured tones describing the monstrous three-eyed fish leopards and the huge water snakes which inhabit an enchanted sheet of water. Next he touched upon the Indians and upon the extraordinary colony of anthropoid apes, which might be looked upon as an advance upon the pithecanthropus of Java and as coming, therefore, nearer than any known form to that hypothetical creature—the missing link. Finally he described, amid some meriting, the ingenious but highly dangerous aeronautic invention of Professor Challenger and wound up a most memorable address by an account of the methods by which the committee did at last find its way back to civilization.

"It had been hoped that the proceedings would end there and that a vote of thanks and congratulation moved by Professor Sergius of Upsala university would be duly seconded and carried. But it was soon evident that the course of events was not destined to flow so smoothly. Symptoms of opposition had been evident from time to time during the evening, and now Dr. James H. Potter of Edinburgh rose in the center of the hall. Dr. Illingworth asked whether an amendment should not be taken before a resolution. "Dr. Illingworth was imperfectly heard in part of his remarks on account of the strenuous opposition of the friends of the explorers. Some attempts were also made to pull him down. Being a man of enormous physique, however, and possessed of a very powerful voice, he dominated the tumult and succeeded in finishing his speech."

Attempts were made to pull him down."

"Dr. Illingworth began his remarks by expressing his high appreciation of the scientific work both of Professor Challenger and of Professor Summerlee. He much regretted that any personal bias should have been read into his remarks, which were entirely dictated by his desire for scientific truth. His position, in fact, was substantially the same as that taken up by Professor Summerlee at the last meeting. At that last meeting Professor Challenger had made certain assertions which had been queried by his colleague. Now this colleague came forward himself with the same assertions and expected them to remain unquestioned. Was this reasonable? (Yes, 'No,' and prolonged interruption, during which Professor Challenger was heard from the press box to ask leave from the chairman to put Dr. Illingworth into the street.) A year ago one man said certain things. Now four men said other and more startling ones. Was this to constitute a final proof where the matters in question were of the most revolutionary and incredible character? There had been recent examples of travelers arriving from the unknown with certain tales which had been too readily accepted.

We want the name of every person everywhere who is suffering with rheumatism, so we can send him a free sample bottle of Hill's Rheumatic Remedy. We don't care how long or how severe he has had it, as there are very few cases that have not yielded and been thoroughly cured with it. It works at once. In twenty-four hours it stops the pain. Don't take our word for it—test it at our expense. This is not a new untried drug. For twenty years it has been regarded by physicians as practically the only certain treatment for this terrible disease.

Over 10,000 Testimonials Like These: Mr. E. M. Ehlers, Sect'y, Grand Lodge of Masons of New York City, writes that, "Although a sufferer from rheumatism for many years two doses stopped all pain and one bottle cured me." Mr. A. Goldman, Victoria, Texas, says: "I am very well pleased with your medicine, am recommending it very highly. It has done more for me than anything I have ever tried." Marshall F. W. Geraty, of 70 Manhattan St., New York, says: "I have suffered with rheumatism for many years, have tried almost every known remedy but got no relief or cure until I took yours. In forty-eight hours I was entirely cured and free from all pain. I send this unqualified." Hill's Rheumatic Remedy is on sale at most drug stores at $1.00 per bottle. One bottle generally effects a complete cure. Call or send for free sample bottle and booklet at once. There is no greater service you can perform for humanity than to tell any rheumatic sufferer about this wonderful preparation. Address: Hill Medicine Co., 117 East 54th St., New York, N. Y.
